Founded in 2002, the Aberystwyth Lancaster Graduate Colloquium (ALGC) established itself as the UK's leading forum in which graduate researchers can explore and discuss critical approaches to global politics. ALGC brings together students and leading scholars in various strands of critical international theory; from constructivist to poststructuralist, Marxist, feminist and postcolonial approaches. The colloquium provides a friendly environment for young scholars to present their ideas and receive feedback on research topics that cut across disciplinary boundaries and explore intersections between international political economy, security studies, political theory and critical geopolitics. This year's colloquium will offer panel presentations and keynote addresses as well as interdisciplinary workshops on critical methodologies convened by leading scholars in the field.

We are inviting abstracts of no more than 200 words, to be submitted by 28 February 2014 via the online form at www.warwick.ac.uk/algc2014.

Our aim is to facilitate inclusive and open conversations across different topics and approaches. We wish to encourage all researchers working from a critical perspective to apply. Papers of 4000-6000 words will be circulated two weeks in advance of the conference in order to facilitate discussion.

There will be no registration fees and successful applicants will be able to apply for bursaries to cover travel expenses.
